

FAIR HOUSING GUIDE for

People with Disabilities

REPORT DISCRIMINATION!

If you believe you may be a victim
of discrimination, contact:

(866) 540-FAIR (3247)

(267) 419-8918

info@equalhousing.org

FAIR HOUSING GUIDE for

People with Disabilities

Fair Housing... It's Your Right!

This guide was developed to assist you in better understanding your rights under the Fair Housing Act, and to increase your ability to recognize the signs of housing discrimination.

Fair Housing Laws

The Fair Housing Act

Title VIII of the Civil Rights Act of 1968, as amended, is known as the Fair Housing Act. The Fair Housing Act prohibits discrimination in housing on the basis of race, color, religion, national origin, sex, disability and familial status (households with children under 18 in a household, pregnant women or anyone in the process of adopting or securing legal custody of a child).

State and Local Fair Housing Laws

The Pennsylvania Human Relations Act makes it illegal to discriminate in a housing related transaction on the basis of age, above the age of 40. Local fair housing ordinances may expand protections based on sexual orientation, gender identity, marital status or source of income so it's important to stay current on local anti-discrimination ordinances in the communities where you operate housing. Housing programs funded by the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) must comply with the Equal Access Rule, which prohibits discrimination on the basis of gender identity, marital status and sexual orientation.

Other Disability Laws

Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act states that no otherwise qualified individual with a disability may be discriminated against in any program or activity receiving federal financial assistance.

The Americans with Disabilities Act (ADA) is a broad civil rights law guaranteeing equal opportunity for individuals with disabilities in employment, public accommodations, transportation, state and local government services and telecommunications.

The Architectural Barriers Act states that all buildings, other than privately owned residential facilities, constructed by, on behalf of, leased by the federal government, or buildings financed in whole or in part with federal funds must be physically accessible for persons with disabilities.

Disability Defined

A disability is defined in the Fair Housing Act as a physical or mental impairment that substantially limits one or more of a person's "major life activities." Major life activities can include caring for one's self, walking, seeing, hearing, speaking, breathing, learning and working. If you require the use of a walker, a wheelchair, a service animal or a personal-care attendant, you are protected under the law against housing discrimination. Disabilities also may include mental or emotional illness, difficulties associated with aging, HIV/AIDS, recovering alcoholism or drug addiction. The Fair Housing Act does not protect those who use drugs illegally. Only people who have successfully completed a treatment program are covered under the law.

It is against the law to do any of the following based on disability:

- Refuse to rent or sell housing
- Refuse to negotiate housing
- Make housing unavailable or deny that housing is available
- Set different terms, conditions or privileges for the sale or rental of housing, a mortgage, home loan, home insurance or any other housing transaction
- Advertise in a discriminatory manner
- Threaten, coerce or intimidate anyone exercising a fair housing right or assisting others in exercising those rights
- Refuse to make reasonable accommodations or modifications

Reasonable Accommodations

A reasonable accommodation is a change in rules, policies, practices, or services that enables a person with a disability equal opportunity to use and enjoy a dwelling. A person with a disability must notify the housing provider if they need a reasonable accommodation, and the housing provider must grant the request if it is reasonable. There must be a connection between the disability and the need for the accommodation. Typically, accommodations will be a matter of negotiating what will serve both the housing provider and the disabled person best.

- Example 1: A woman with a visual impairment has a guide dog. She is applying to an apartment building with a no-pets policy. The building manager must allow her to keep the guide dog as a reasonable accommodation.
- Example 2: A man with a heart problem can only walk short distances. Although the apartment building has parking on a first come, first served basis, the man is allowed to have a reserved space next to his unit.

Reasonable Modifications

A reasonable modification is a change in the physical structure of a dwelling that enables a person with a disability equal opportunity to use and enjoy that dwelling. In many cases, individualized modifications to a dwelling enable a person with a disability to live in a space that they would be otherwise physically unable to live in. Normally, the expense of the modifications would be the responsibility of the tenant, unless the housing is federally subsidized (such as a Public Housing Authority). This includes the interior and exterior of a building or a unit, including public and common-use areas.

- Example 1: A tenant that uses a wheelchair requires a ramp to access the entrance of the dwelling. The property management must allow the tenant to make the modifications, at the tenant's expense.
- Example 2: An elderly man living in an apartment building has a physical impairment due to aging, and requests that grab bars be installed in his bathroom in order to stabilize himself. His landlord must allow the installation, again at the tenant's expense.

Private housing providers can require that the tenant use a certified contractor to do the work, and can require that the tenant restore the dwelling to its original condition upon moving out of the unit if the modification will interfere with the next tenant's use and enjoyment of the premises. For example, if a tenant has a ramp to the laundry room built in a multi-unit apartment complex, this does not need to be removed because it is located in a common use area and may be beneficial to future tenants. However, if cabinets in the kitchen are lowered to provide more mobility to a wheelchair user, these may be required to be returned to the original condition.

If restorations to the dwelling are necessary when a tenant moves out, a housing provider may negotiate payment by the tenant into an interest-bearing escrow account. Such payments may be made over a reasonable period; the amount must be reasonable and cannot exceed the cost of the restorations. The interest from the account accrues to the benefit of the tenant.

What is Reasonable?

A request for an accommodation or modification is considered reasonable if that request:

- Does not cause an undue financial and administrative burden to the housing provider
- Does not cause a basic change in the nature of the housing program available
- Will not cause harm or damage to others
- Is technologically possible

- Example 1: It would be unreasonable for a person with a disability to ask that the housing provider assist them with their meals, unless the housing provider were in the business of providing meal support (such as in an assisted living facility).
- Example 2: If a person becomes disabled and can no longer access their 3rd floor apartment in a non-elevator building, it would be unreasonable (and probably architecturally impossible) to request the landlord allow the tenant to build an elevator.

Tips for Writing an Accommodation or Modification Request

It is the responsibility of the consumer to request that the housing provider make an accommodation or modification, since a provider cannot be expected to predict or anticipate an individual's needs. Although not required by the Fair Housing Act, it is recommended that requests for accommodation or modification should be made in writing for proper documentation and include proof that the consumer has a covered disability and the need for accommodation or modification. Indicate that you qualify as a person with a disability as defined by civil rights laws. It is not necessary to reveal the nature or severity of your disability, unless you feel comfortable in doing so.

1. State where you live and who is responsible for the building.
2. Describe the policy, rule, or architectural barrier that is problematic to you.
3. Describe how this policy or barrier interferes with your needs, rights, or enjoyment of your housing.
4. In clear and concise language, describe the change you are seeking in the policy, rule or barrier.
5. Cite the applicable law that protects your rights.
6. For accommodations use: Fair Housing Act Amendments Sec. 804 (42 U.S.C. 3604)(f)(3)(B)
7. For modifications use: Fair Housing Act Amendments, Sec. 804 (42 U.S.C. 3604)(f)(3)(A)
8. Ask for a written response within a certain amount of time.
9. Sign and date the request. Remember to keep a copy of your request for your files.

Questions a Housing Provider May Ask a Prospective Tenant

Housing providers may inquire into an applicant's ability to meet tenancy requirements. This means a landlord may ask whether you have sufficient income to be able to pay the rent, whether you are willing to comply with the building's rules, and other questions relating directly to tenancy. A housing provider may also adopt and apply uniform, objective and nondiscriminatory criteria designed to evaluate a prospective tenant's credit worthiness, such as imposing credit or criminal background checks. Any questions asked by a housing provider must be asked to all applicants on an equal opportunity basis, without regard to race, color, religion, national origin, sex, familial status or disability.

If a landlord is providing housing designed for and occupied by persons with disabilities or with a particular type of disability, he/she may ask whether you qualify for this type of housing. A landlord who provides this type of housing may ask if an applicant qualifies for a priority available to persons with disabilities or with a particular type of disability.

A housing provider may not ask:

- If you have any type of disability
- The nature or severity of a disability
- Questions that would require you to waive your rights to confidentiality regarding your medical condition or history
- To see a prospective tenant's medical records

Grounds for Rejection of an Applicant or Eviction of a Tenant

If the tenant or prospective applicant refuses or is unable to comply with the tenancy rules that apply to all tenants, or if the tenancy would pose a direct physical threat to the health or safety of others, then the housing provider can reject that applicant or evict that tenant.

Accessibility and New Construction

Under the Fair Housing Act, single story units in new multifamily housing built for first occupancy after March 13, 1991 must be accessible if the buildings contain four or more units and if the units are either located on the first floor or are served by an elevator. To comply with the accessibility requirements of the Fair Housing Act, the housing must include the following features:

- An accessible building entrance on an accessible route
- Accessible public and common-use areas
- Doors that allow passage by a person in a wheelchair
- Accessible route into and through the dwelling unit
- Light switches, thermostats and other environmental controls in accessible locations
- Reinforcements in bathroom walls for later installation of grab bars
- Kitchens and bathrooms that allow a wheelchair to maneuver about the space

The Housing Equality Center is a nonprofit organization leading the effort to eliminate housing discrimination in Pennsylvania through education, advocacy and enforcement of fair housing laws. We provide victims of discrimination with legal help, perform testing to determine the existence of discrimination, educate the public, consult with and train housing providers, and work with housing and related service providers to ensure compliance with anti-discrimination laws. The Housing Equality Center provides fair housing counseling, testing, and investigations services for victims of discrimination in Bucks, Chester, Delaware, Lehigh, Montgomery, Northampton and Philadelphia Counties in Pennsylvania.

Housing Equality Center

(267) 419-8918 or

(866) 540-FAIR (3247)

455 Maryland Drive, Suite 190

Fort Washington, PA 19034

info@equalhousing.org

equalhousing.org

Funding under a grant with the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development supported the work that provided the basis for this publication. The substance and findings of the work are dedicated solely to the public. The author and publisher are solely responsible for the accuracy of the statements and interpretations contained in this publication. Such interpretations do not necessarily reflect the views of the Federal Government.

WHAT TO DO IF YOU ENCOUNTER DISCRIMINATION!

If you believe you may be a victim of discrimination,
contact:

(866) 540-FAIR (3247)

(267) 419-8918

info@equalhousing.org

HOUSING
EQUALITY CENTER
of Pennsylvania

455 Maryland Drive, Suite 190
Fort Washington, PA 19034
equalhousing.org